ASTONISHED CLERKS.

The other day when an investigation of the accounts of Levi Bacon, late financial clerk of the patent office, revealed the fact that he was a defaulter to the sum of $33,000, the wonder and excitement of the clerks, who a few days before had solemnly resolved that the death of such an official was a public calamity and that his devotion to duty and sterling integrity were worthy of emulation and admiration, may be faintly imagined but not accurately described. It had been Bacon's custom to prepay the salaries of his friends for months in advance. One had drawn $500 more than was due, and so quite a number of the clerks felt a sorrow very personal, for scores of due-bills had told their own story. The Secretary gave stringent orders to deduct these amounts from the salaries of the delinquents, and as a result some of them will not handle any Government cash in several months. Mr. Jas. L. Norris, Chairman of the Democratic Executive Committee of the District of Columbia, a prominent patent attorney, is also a sincere mourner, being one of Bacon's bondsmen.

Cattle Thieves.

Out at Winnemucca they have a wealthy cattleman in jail for appropriating other people's cattle. The APPEAL hopes, if the man is guilty, that he will have to break rock in the Penitentiary.

The small cattlemen say that the big cattlemen have a habit of announcing that a certain range about a hundred miles long all belongs to them. It is unfenced, and if any cattle happen to stray into their range they are immediately appropriated. This sort of business is getting played out in this State, and if certain parties are not more careful with their lassos and branding irons there will be a regular Hong Di matinee in Nevada. There are certain men who are such chronic cattle thieves that they will never quit until they see some neighbor hanging to a tree.

Cleveland's Substitute.

At last, Mr. Cleveland's war substitute comes to the front, and makes in substance, this statement, which is attested by three credible witnesses. That name is George Brinkley and that Grover Cleveland paid him $150 to act as his substitute, which service he faithfully performed, that Mr. Cleveland promised to help him, should he survive the war, and that he is now old, poor and enfeebled by disease, that he is the inmate of a Soldier's and Sailor's Hospital, at Bath N. J., that although the President's attention has been repeatedly called to his case he has done nothing for him since the war, and will not even use his influence to have him pensioned. His war-worn substitute forgets that his ungrateful and unpatriotic beneficiary is prejudiced against pensioning Union Veterans.

It will not be enough to enact more rigid laws for the exclusion of paupers, imbeciles, lunatics and criminals. Legislation for the exclusion of persons like those now here who openly work for the overthrow of our institutions is required and great care should be taken to provide trustworthy machinery for the execution of any laws that shall be made. —New York Times.

A Brooklyn Jury played poker while trying to agree on a verdict, and when a Court officer interrupted the game and scolded the players they grew indignant and secured his suspension. The haughty American Juror is bound to have it understood that when the wind is Southerly he knows justice from a jack pot.

John Stone who settled on the Truckee Meadows in 1858, died recently in Boston, Massachusetts. "Stone's Crossing," on the Truckee was a place well known to all who rushed to "Washoe" from California during the silver excitement in 1859 and 1860.
